Everything changes and nothing remains still

Panta rhei – everything flows. Nothing is now as it has been before. You can find more sentences like this if you look into the published words since Heraclite, Plato or Shakespeare. These experiences are common for everybody but everybody has to realise them himself since these over 2000 years.

The human nature seems to learn fast but also to forget fast-mostly when the results of the thoughts will not be reachable directly but only after decades.

Not finally Kopenhagen 2009 has shown to the world that the mankind has much difficulty to change behaviour when at first the abdication of something has to be realised in order to get a good result perhaps for the following generation

Looking after the demands of Oncology pharmacy I remember the discussion in Prague 2000.

Nearly the most European delegates in the ISOPP have declared the necessity to build regional chapters in order to support new colleagues in the world the best in implementing oncology pharmacy in the hospitals everywhere.

The discussion between our colleagues was not effective enough due to the poor consideration.

On the one hand the availability of one common language, one common law and one country with several states compared to the European situation with more than 27 languages, more than 27 different countries and laws was not comprehensively respected.

As it was not possible in that moment to bring these different experiences together and to build an understanding for the needs in Asia, South America, Africa and finally Europe, in order to foster the regional collaboration and development, the EU-delegates have formed the new society named ESOP.

Today after 10 years you can find the ESOP as full member of the ECCO in close collaboration with more than 45000 physicians and nurses as a Society of 33 countries and more than 2100 oncology pharmacists.

The reports of the different countries in this issue are presenting to you flashlights of the improvement which have been achieved in the last 10 years. I look at them as a strong base of more progress in changes for a better service of cancer patients in future.

The European nations have still to learn how to talk with one voice and the motto since 1995 “Unity in diversity” is still a goal to be reached. The aim of ESOP is to support optimal treatment for cancer patients. Our constitution shows us the way how to act. The collaboration with all people and societies which have the same purpose is evident. We have the chance and the obligation to be active in our home countries, in Europe as well as in the whole world. We will have a second chance to share our grown understanding in the next ISOPP meeting in May 2010 in Prague.
